VOLUME XXXI.

ANN ARBOR, MICHIGAN, FRIDAY, MAY 12, 1876.

THE ATHEIST.

The fool hath said, "There is no God!"
No God! Who lights the morning sun,
And sends him on his heavenly road,
A far and brilliant ocurse to run?
Who, when the radiant day is done,
Holds forth the moon's nocturnal lamp,
And bids the planets, one by one,
Steal o'er the night vales dark and damp?

No God! Who gives the evening dew?
The fanning breeze, the fostering shower?
Who warms the spring morn's budding bough
And plants the summer's noontide flower?
Who spreads in the autumnal bower
The fruit trees' mellow stores around,
And sends the winter's icy power
To invigorate the exhausted ground?

No God! Who makes the bird to wing
Its flight like arrow through the sky,
And gives the deer the power to spring
From rock to rock triumphantly?
Who formed Behemoth, huge and high,
That at a draught the river drains,
And great Levishan to lie ting isle, on ocean plains?

No God! Who warms the heart to heave!
With thousand reclings soft and sweet,
And prompts the aspiring soul to leave
The earth we tread beneath our feet,
And soar away on pinions fleet
Beyond the scenes of mortal strife,
With fair, ethereal forms to meet,
That tells us of the after life?

No God! Who fixed the solid ground Of pillars strong that after not?
Who spread the curtained skies around?
Who doth the ocean bounds allot?
Who all things to perfection brought
On earth below, in heaven above?
Go ask the fool of impious thought
Who dares to say, "There is no God!"

HARRY WINSOME.

How He Won His Epaulets.

CHAPTER THE FIRST-LIFE IN THE GUN BOOM Harry Winsome wasn't a model midhipman like those you read of in novels. There was nothing very wonderful about nim at all, in fact. On shore, when he happened to go to a party or ball, he did not try to dance all the evening with the tallest and fairest for partners; he did not bully the blue-jackets and call them not bully the blue-jackets and call them duffers when in charge of a boat; and on board he never shirked his work or "fudged" the sums the naval instructor gave him to work, and he never went on the sick-list with the tooth-ache, and he didn't spend one-half of his time at the time. But Harry had to submit to be bullied a good deal himself. Hicks took his rum regularly; Harry didn't mind. Hicks "borrowed" his pens, ink, and paper; Harry had plenty. The mildest name that ever Hicks called him was officers!" And Jooma bowed low, in more corrections of the sum of the side didn't spend one-half of his time at the masthead because he chose to spend the other half in playing tricks on his supellarry. rior officers. But if Harry had nothing very brilliant about his character—and brilliancy, mind you, is a very dangerous thing for a naval midshipman to be pos-sessed of—he had something that was far better: he had that plodding spirit so Harry became a naval cadet and floated away from shore, perched upon his seachest, to join his ship, although not enamored of his new profession, Harry "meant to go on with it." No one likes But that same evening, on aust be allowed—on board the gunboat Badger the first thought that occurred to him was that he had never seen such onfusion in his life; for, although the vessel was under sailing orders, and in less than twelve hours would be south of the Needles, hardly any of the stores had as yet been struck down, and the deck was a perfect litter. Harry wouldn't have known what to do if it hadn't been for his friend and servant the coxswain. That worthy sailor touched him on the shoulder and told him to go and report himself to the tall officer who was walking the quarter-deck.

"That," added the coxswain, "is the commander—not a stricter officer in the service; t'other, the shortish gray-headed entleman's the doctor, the kindest and best hearted that ever breathed. Sheer off, master, they be looking this way." "And so, youngster," said the com-nander, who, to Harry's mind, couldn't have been very much shorter than the funnel of his own ship, "you've thought proper to join at last, have you? A fine ot of French leave you've taken.' Poor Harry felt as if he had a pin cushion in his throat, which he could neither get down nor up, and it was only with difficulty he restrained the tears. The commander wasn't slow to note the lad's confusion.

"So-ho!" he continued, "going to cry, hey? Brought up at a ladies' semary, hey? Pretty sailor you'll make."
"Excuse me, sir," said the surgeon, who ing Law of this State. The stockholders are indi- had entered the navy rather late in life, ing Law of this state. find them. Can you foight?"
"I think I can," said Harry modestly;
"but I never tried." "Ha! ha!" laughed the old doctor; very good indeed. Capital!"

A long, low, dark room on one side of the steerage, lighted only by two small ports-this was the gun-room. A table ccupied nearly its entire space, leaving nerely room, and no more, for the cushioned lockers, which served for seats. The surgeon knocked and entered, dipping his head as he did so, to allow a ourser's shoe to whistle harmlessly over

"Oh! come away, doctor," said a voice; "I thought it was that beggarly steward; he has allowed Johnson to drink my rum again to-day."

Harry promised to do all his messmate's sums for him. "For you know," that youth explained, "I'm an awfully lazy beggar; Lawson's my name—Lazy Lawson, the instructor calls me; and can't he hit hard with the ruler! my word!"

Lawson also gave him a history of all his messmates, from the sub-licutenant—who was quiet and allowed Hicks, the

CHAPTER THE SECOND-AT LAST. When three years had passed away—and, oh, how quickly years do fly in the navy!—Harry felt he liked the service. When five years had come and gone he positively loved it, and wouldn't have changed places with a lord on shore. All this time Harry had never once been home, for when one commission was done he had volunteered for a second in the same station; and not only he, but his dearest friend, Lazy Lawson, and his faithful servant, Dan Williams, had all effected an exchange into the corvette Vengeance, just newly out from England. Harry was soon senior midship-man on that ship, and ere very long junior sub-liutenant.

You would hardly have known Harry Winsome now. He was no longer the bashful boy, who rode on board his first ship ontop of his sea-chest, but a tall and ndsome young man—still a little quietlooking, and with a cast of care on his countenance, but with fair irrepressible hair that curled over his well-bronzed brow, and an eye that never feared to look you in the face.

"Heigho!" said Harry to his friend and chum one Sunday morning; "I wonder if there will ever be any fighting o give a fellow a chance to win his epau-

"Epaulets, indeed!" replied Lawson, who was still a middy; "I only wish I could win my scales and a stripe, let alone epaulets. But I suppose I shall never be anything but Lazy Lawson. I envy you Harry. How the dickens do you manage it?" "I just keep pegging away," said Harry.

They were the and slippery, with long hair and wild eyes—men who fought with brandished spear and broadsword. Harry came down almost as quickly as effected on the edge of a mangrove forest, and honest Jooma found a path because he had been round he had gone up, went below, and entered the commander's cabin. Shortly afterward, the order was passed to let the men have dinner half an hour sooner; and even a novice could have told, from look very soldier-like on shore, but nevertheless they can do their work, as witness the Crimea. The month of May was a conspicuou one in our revolutionary and pre-revolu-tionary history. In May, 1765, the ac-tion of the Virginia Legislature, led by Patrick Henry, insisting upon the rights "Well, after all, captain," said the avigating-lieutenant, "I think old of that colony to make its own laws and impose its own taxes, exerted a powerful influence over the rest in shaping popular feeling into a settled purpose. Horse Against Velocipede.

A large attendance of sporting men were in Deerfoot park yesterday, to see the trot of A. B. Williams' w. g. White-cloud against David Stanton's ride on a bycicle. The distance was five miles. Before starting Stanton had the call at $50 to $40. He was allowed an eighth of a mile start on account of having to ride nine feet from the pole. The diam-eter of the wheel is fifty-eight inches. At the word horse and man went off at a rattling gait. Stanton led for the first half mile, but was easily passed by the horse within ten lengths of the score on the first mile; time 3:05. The second mile was finished by the horse in 3:21. Starton completed two miles to the horses two miles and a half. At the twoand-three-quarter mile pole the horse again passed Stanton, making his third mile in 2:53. On the fourth mile the horse was going easy and well, while Stanton plodded pluckily on, but it was evident that he was beat. The horse crossed the score in 2:56. The fifth was the fastest mile, the horse trotting in 2:51, beating Stanton by a mile and ten yards. Total time of the five miles, 15:06.—New York Sun.

celebrated Heckendorn Plow, which has been awarded premiums at the Michigan State Fairs of 0 and 1875, has this season been improved by making the moldboard separate from the standard, es the plow more durability and greater strength. It is now the lightest draft plow in use, and k is unrivalled in the field. Its peculiar self-sharpening point is the simplest and most economy known to plow-makers. Its reversible share is a feature of great importance, as it doubles the cower of an important part of the plow. ANN ARBOR AGRICULTURAL WORKS, Ann Arbor, Mich.

Church Dedication.

The new Congregational Church in this city vas formally dedicated on Wednesday, the P. M. The services opened with an "Organ congregation joining. The "Prayer of Invocation" was then made and the Scripture lesson read by Rev. J. Morgan Smith, of Grand Rapids, followed by the "Prayer of Dedication," by the pastor, Rev. H. L. Hubbell. The Dedication Hymn" was next sung by the hoir, beginning:

"A fading glory covers all And mantles roof, and arch, and wall." followed by the congregation in the hymn, "Arise, O King of grace, arise, And enter to thy rest."

The sermon was given by Rev. Dr. Eddy, of Detroit, from Eph. ii. 19-22. The sermon was a timely and powerful discourse, and was universally commended. 'Tax-Payer," we had supposed that our full and detailed report was satisfactory to the most querulous of tax-payers—certainly at the xpense of much time and labor we endeavored to make it such. But especially did we think that every member of the board of supervisors who lestened to the explanation which accompanied the report was satisfied that the superintendents had faithfully and that the superintendents had faithfully and nonestly administered their trust. We felt further assured of this when a few days after making our report the board of supervisors accepted and adopted the following report:

To the Honorable Board of Supervisors of Washtenane County;
Your committee to examine the accounts of the superintendents of the poor would respectully report that they have examined said accounts and compared them with the report nade by said superintendents and find them correct. We find the books and papers in plain and orderly shape, carefully footed, well arranged, and easily understood. We examned somewhat particularly the prices paid for goods and supplies used in the county house, nd reasonable. We also examined, as far as

GRANT'S REVENGE.

He Relieves Gen. Custer of His Command-The General's Reward for Testifying Against Belknap.

[Washington Cor. New York World.]
President Grant has to-day performed an act which appears to be the most high-handed abuse of his official power which he has perpetrated yet. As is well known, Gen. Custer gave important testimony before the investiga ion committees relative to the post tradership frauds, and was subpænaed by the House managers as a witness in the impeachment trial. In obedience to that subpœna he came on, and has been here for some days. To-day the Presi dent relieved him from his command When the news came to Gen. Sherman outwell or Butler? - Do Curtis and Sandford go before the country on their own well doing? Pray what have they done but make speeches? VIII., p. 75, speaks of his practice of leaving with his chief clerk blank papers, signed by him, to be used, when neces sary, for proclamations, remission of penalties, and commission of consuls. He speaks also of doing the same thing in regard to patents and land grants President Jackson was absent from the seat President Jackson was absent from the seat of Government 502 days. Among other important acts performed by him when away from Washington was his signing at Boston the famous order for the removal of deposits from the State banks. The memorandum at this point refers to President Jackson's refusal, in 1883, to furnish the Senate a copy of a certain paper alleged to have been read by him to the Cabinet, and meutions that in January, 1837, he refused to allow a committee of the House of Representatives to make a general investigation of the Executive Departments without specific charges, on the ground, among others, that the use of official books and records for such purposes interfere with the discharge of public business.

Mr. Sandford was President of the Massachusetts Republican convention and is commended as the chief of reformers in that body. He made a speech of which this sentence is a type:

"As to the fall of Mr. Belknap, he would not criticise the spirit and motive that have turned a Democratic majority into a grand jury of inquest with the manifest purpose of going before the country not upon its own well doing, but upon its success in soiling Republican vestments."

And this we are asked to believe in a spirit of honest, unpartisan civil-service reform. For whatever of possibility any Republicans in Massachusetts, New York or elsewhere have to break the Republican "machine," they are indebted to the Democratic House. Up to the running for Governor he declared that if time its committees began to work, the 'machine' was absolute, despotic and triumphant. Efforts to purify the ingang in the penitentiary that "their legs ternal revenue officials, and the convictions of McDonald and Avery, produced no visible effect. Babcock was acquitted and welcomed in triumph to the ted and welcomed in triumph to the White-house. Bristow had not a reforming element in the party which would justify his resignation, and he meekly endured the slings and arrows of the "machine." The Republican reformers could not even count on the de-teat of Grant's third nomination, and they were as much under the heel of the ing Company at Williamstown, the North Pownal Manufacturing Company at Pownal, Vt., and the Arnoldsville mill awhich banished Sherman and Meigs, and sent Sumner in sorrow to his grave, as they had been for five years. The ring around the President was intact and indelible as against all Republican efforts. But when Democratic committees exposed Belknap, compelled the resignation of him and Schenck, un-civil service reform. And now that prisoil-dcore of these formers have been unlocked by a Democratic House, they implifient unlocked turn on those who gave them life and liberty, and either charge, as does the Times, that Democratic investigators liave done nothing, or, as does Mr. Sandford, that they have done something good, but the motive was only to soil "Republican vestments." Republican reformers pretend in New York and Massachusetts that their great end and purpose is to destroy the Republican "machine," as they call it. But with what ulterior motive? Did Curtis draw back from soiling the gar-ments of Conkling? Or did Sandford protest that he would throw no mud on

It has been the good pleasure of the lirt-eating partisan administration papers of the country to belittle the importan of the evidence against the President brought out by Caulfield in his discovery of the payment, on Grant's order, of large sums of money for election purposes to Johnny Davenport. It has been said that Davenport has got the start of the committee, and that he has showed that the money given him was necessary for the prevention and detection of the Tweed frauds in New York. This was Davenport's smart explanation, and at it every administration-lover howled with delight, and also at the cheerful manner in which Davenport captured the committee. This was all very well till Davenport was called upon to prove what he had said. To do this he brought over from New York a trunk full of vouchers, and talked around town in the most confident manner, saying that he could show exactly where he had spent every cent of the fund given him. To-day Davenport weakened under the examination, and is now about as demoralized a being as one could well imagine. In order to account for the large sums of money given him, he has raked high and low for vouchers of all kinds. He has had to go back over a year from the time when he received any money from the secret-service fund and has continued his vouchers up to a time over a year beyond when the last payments were made. These vouchers cover all sorts of expenditures in Davenport's office, but they corruption which have thus far astound- have no more relation to the expendi
